Issigeac is a small commune in the Dordogne department, in the Nouvelle-Aquitaine region of southwestern France. It is especially known for its medieval charm, picturesque setting, and vibrant local boutiques and restaurants.

The village features ancient streets, stone houses, pretty squares, and a popular Sunday morning market that attracts many visitors.

Issigeac is also conveniently located near Bergerac, renowned for its wines.

The largest town in the region, Bergerac is an ideal destination for those seeking a tranquil environment while still being within easy reach of urban amenities. Bergerac benefits from both an SNCF train station and an airport, making it easy to access major cities and international travel.

Bordeaux, a UNESCO World Heritage site, is just 1 hour 40 minutes away.
